Our Year

Fighting for the Displaced

We’ve provided more than 5.8 million meals and drinks to victims and aid workers

During the most catastrophic, and costly, hurricane season in our history, The Salvation Army was there. Emergency Disaster Services experts, volunteers, and staff came from every corner of the continent to serve survivors in Houston, Naples, Puerto Rico, and hundreds of impacted communities in between. More than 5.8 million meals, snacks, and drinks were provided; thousands of people sheltered; and 147,586 emotional and spiritual care contacts were made, thanks to selfless efforts and hearts. And support continues today. Thanks to the generosity of donors, $76 million has been invested in long-term recovery work to ensure the people of the Gulf Coast, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands have hope and healing to rebuild.
Fighting for the Overlooked

The Salvation Army operates 3,042 service extension units across the country

An analysis of The Salvation Army’s Human Needs Index, conducted last year by Indiana University’s Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, revealed that persistent pockets of poverty across the rural United States might be underestimated by government poverty data. The Salvation Army’s Service Extension program is a unique approach to serving rural populations outside of established cities and towns. These service units are primarily powered by volunteers in nearby communities, often members of law enforcement or local churches and community organizations. Active through 3,042 locations across the country, service units offer assistance to people experiencing unforeseen crises ranging from an emergency need for food or transportation to temporary shelter.
Fighting for the Underserved

The Salvation Army served 52,259,152 meals to the hungry in 2017

Despite gains in the economy and declining poverty rates, food insecurity remains surprisingly high. Food deserts are a familiar problem in impoverished inner cities such as East Baltimore, where riots in 2015 drove away the sole grocer in the community. In response to this scarcity of resources, The Salvation Army established the Doing the Most Good (DMG) Food Store, the first grocery store in the nation to combine social services with a traditional grocery-shopping experience. The store offers nutritional guidance, shopping education, and meal-planning services, as well as job training for a variety of positions.
Fighting for the Addicted

The Salvation Army operated 141 rehabilitation centers nationwide in 2017.

America is in the grip of a public-health emergency as millions of people struggle with an addiction to opioids. It is estimated that 175 people a day die from drug overdoses. As the largest private provider of free residential addiction-recovery services, The Salvation Army is on the front lines providing detox, rehabilitation, and spiritual and emotional care to help people get their lives back on track. This is especially valuable in many communities across the country where The Salvation Army is the only affordable option for addiction recovery.
Fighting for the Jobless

In 2017, we generated 38,987 job referrals through our employee assistance program.

Almost 36 million working-age adults are estimated to lack sufficient training, skills, and educational achievement for today’s workforce. Our “hand-up” programs provide skills and strengths assessments, job-search counseling and support, and a number of programs that teach new employable skills. These programs are increasingly important as many government assistance programs, like SNAP and Medicaid, are adding work requirements to their eligibility criteria.
Fighting to Change Perceptions

The Salvation Army provided 9,905,970 people with shelter in 2017

Poverty looks different than most Americans think. To help showcase the plight of hardworking folks throughout our communities struggling to make ends meet, we partnered with The Wall Street Journal to develop a series of articles and videos showcasing the daily battles families must endure just to stay afloat. In doing so, The Salvation Army illustrated just how important our supplementary services are in the lives of those fighting to thrive.
Dear friends,

Over the past year, The Salvation Army has celebrated many victories in our fight for good. Through the generosity of our donors, the devotion of our staff, and the selfless efforts of our volunteers, we have successfully waged war on hunger, homelessness, and hopelessness across every ZIP code in America.

But as Paul reminds us in 2 Corinthians 10:4, “The weapons we fight with are not the weapons of the world. On the contrary, they have divine power to demolish strongholds.”

Only because we are armed with God’s ever-present weapons of hope, kindness, joy, and compassion are we able to continually fight for those ravaged by storms, broken by addictions, battered by homelessness, and weakened by hunger. It is a true testament to His divine power that we have been able to help, heal, and impact so many lives over the past 365 days.

When the opioid crisis reached startling new heights – with 175 people a day dying from drug overdoses – we fought back with physical, emotional, and spiritual care.

When grocery shortages, unemployment, and resource deprivation threatened the survival of entire communities, we fought back with food pantries, job skills, and service units.

And when the United States was hit by the most catastrophic and costly hurricane season in history, we fought back with fresh water, warm meals, and selfless hearts.

As I reflect on these accomplishments, I am eternally grateful for the ample financial, spiritual, emotional, and physical contributions to the work of The Salvation Army. It is you, our faithful supporters, who make it possible for us to go to battle armed with God’s greatest weapons – all for God’s greatest glory.

Humbly,

Tony Thompson
National Advisory Board Chairman
David Hudson

Fight the good fight of the faith. Take hold of the eternal life to which you were called when you made your good confession in the presence of many witnesses. – 1 Timothy 6:12

Dear friends,

At a time when conflict, disputes, and divisions seem all too prevalent throughout our culture, there is great comfort in the call to “fight the good fight” – to come together for causes bigger than ourselves as we work alongside the Lord to serve our most vulnerable neighbors, friends, and fellow citizens.

While The Salvation Army has existed to fulfill this simple command since our founding in 1865, the past year serves as proof that our mission remains as relevant today as it was over 150 years ago. And as we’ve battled natural disasters, poverty, joblessness, food insecurity, and America’s opioid crisis, we’ve been immeasurably blessed to see just how far a little good can go.

Through the tireless dedication of our staff, volunteers, and generous donors, we’ve helped millions of people overcome pain, fear, destruction, loss, and addiction.

We’ve sheltered and fed 5.8 million displaced hurricane survivors and invested $76 million in long-term recovery efforts – giving them hope for the future.

We’ve provided low- and no-cost detox, rehabilitation, and care to those caught in the grip of opioid dependence – giving them a second chance at life.

We’ve created vocational training programs to serve the 36 million working-age adults who are currently underqualified for today’s job force – giving them a way up and out of chronic poverty.

And we’ve brought groceries, assistance, and vital emergency services to communities otherwise lacking access to food, shelter, and support – thus giving them tools to thrive despite their limitations.

With your continued hard work, prayers, and faithful financial contributions, I am confident that we will continue to fight – and win – the good fight, wherever the Lord may lead us.

Yours in His Service,

David Hudson, Commissioner
National Commander

About The Salvation Army

“Doing The Most Good.” In these four words, our mission – to feed, to clothe, to comfort, to care. To rebuild broken homes and broken lives. By walking with the addicted, we can lead them to recovery. In fighting hunger and poverty, we can feed and nurture the spirit. And, in living and sharing the Christian Gospel by meeting tangible needs, we give the world a lasting display of the love behind our beliefs.

The Salvation Army operates over 7,617 centers in communities across the United States. These include food distribution, disaster relief, rehabilitation centers, anti-human trafficking efforts, and a wealth of children’s programs. Our work is funded through kettle donations, corporate contributions, and the sale of goods donated to our Salvation Army Family Stores. Eighty-two cents of every dollar we spend supports our various missions across the country. We are a tax-exempt 501(c)(3) organization, and contributions are deductible for Federal Income Tax Purposes to the extent permitted under Section 170(b)(2) for corporations.

An international movement, The Salvation Army is an evangelical arm of the universal Christian Church. Our message is based on the Bible, and our ministry is motivated by the love of God. We preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ and meet human needs in His name without discrimination.
